Keys patching up in time for spring, summer tourists

A little more than six months after Hurricane Irma ravaged much of the Florida Keys, the area is looking to a booming tourist season to aid its recovery. Since the storm, many improvements, both openings and renovations, have wrapped up along the 125-mile-long island chain. Here are some of the highlights:

- On Islamorada, Cheeca Lodge Resort & Spa will reopen on March 30 after renovating its meetings and event spaces. The resort also is opening an oceanfront tiki bar and pool as well as a new restaurant, Mia Cucina, a family-friendly Italian bistro.
